Indian Health Service Sexual Assault Response Team Trainings for Tribal Communities

The Indian Health Service is inviting Tribal and Federal health care providers, law enforcement, prosecutors, and victim advocates for a two-day, sexual assault response team (SART) training. Participants will learn how to set up SARTs in their jurisdictions. Tribes interested in participating in this free training are encouraged to send a group of four individuals: a health care provider, a police officer, a prosecutor, and a victim advocate. Each member of the four-person team will learn his or her role in a SART. Materials will be provided. (Meals not provided.)

Registration for the SART trainings will be open to Tribal communities with SARTs or those who are interested in starting a SART. Seating is limited, so please register as soon as possible to ensure your ability to participate.
