

To whom it may concern:

My name is Michael I'm a member of the muscogee creek nation I am currently incarcerated here in oklahoma and while talking to a fellow inmate about books he informed me that he had wrote to this place in california and recieved a book about the creek Indians he told me that he had heard about it from another inmate who claimed they had also wrote and got a book, he said the other guy told him to just write this place and ask them about this book well he's not one to ever expect anything for free but figured he'd write and ask about the book anyway not expecting anything free he would have been willing to pay for it, but he said that they sent him the book i've had a chance to look at the book but not in great detail however what little i did see has me really wishing i had this book for myself I'm alot like my friend in the regard that I dont expect free gifts but I'm not really in the position to be buying books but I cant help wanting this book so I got this address from my friend and decided I'd write and see if maybe you could help me also.

The name of the book is.

"A Sacred path"

The way of the muscogee creeks

Again I dont expect anything free

however I dont have much money if there is anyway that you could help me
it would be greatly appreciated

Dear Michael :

Thank you for your interest in the Sacred Path book, published by UCLA's American Indian Studies Center and your letter postmarked March 28th.

Please do not hesitate to contact me with requests for books. Most of the books we publish tend to be somewhat academic, but our library occasionally has duplicates of books of more general interest that we are more than happy to donate to prisoners. Enclosed please find a complimentary copy of A Sacred Path: The Way of the Muscogee Creeks. Unfortunately, our library doesn't have any other books on the Muscogee, but I went online and printed out some pages that may be of interest to you.

I hope you enjoy the book and manuscript pages. Thank you again for your interest.

Sincerely,
